

Graduate Student Stipend Opportunities Canadian Work Disability Policy Research

The Centre for Research on Work Disability Policy (CRWDP) is a transdisciplinary initiative on the future of work disability policy in Canada. We are a national initiative with clusters in British Columbia, Ontario, Québec, and Newfoundland. We recently received funding from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) for a period of seven years.

Illness and disability touch most people at some point over their lifetime. CRWDP's objective is to identify how people, when disabled, can be better retained and integrated into the Canadian labour market.

CRWDP has laid the foundations for a rich training and mentoring program for graduate students. This includes 70 graduate stipend years of funding for masters and doctoral students over the seven-year SSHRC funding period. Other opportunities to get involved include student provincial caucuses, community-based internships, and student forums on our website.

Are you interested in completing research and a thesis on Canadian work disability policy at the University of Waterloo? If you are, find out more about Waterloo's program at School of Public Health and Health Systems and contact CRWDP Co-Director Ellen MacEachen at ellen.maceachen@uwaterloo.ca.

Graduate Student Opportunities

- research
- training
- policy field work

HOW TO GET INVOLVED
www.crwdp.ca

Canadian work disability policy research